Mr H. is not only a close realer and an ardent student so far as his anther is concerned, but he is exceedingly careful in his mak -up, he not only enacts the character, but appears it -if we may be allowed such an expression. The minul t point claims from him as close attention as the most prominent; for it is in the little points an individual shows his full character A true artist, such as Mr. Warner, hever forgets this fact; in truth, a real artist could not overlook or forget, it is his nature to put himself into the character, and, for the time being, his own individuality is lost in that of the character he represents. The support rendered by the members of the company was all that could be asked. To-night Mr. Warner takes his benefit, and presents a character of exceeding difficulty: Shylock," in the Merchant of Venice He will also give us a touch in a different style as Petruchio in Taming the Shrew.

A Degraded Woman.

DISASTER IN COVINGTON.

Ferrible Explosion-One Man Killed and Twelve Wounded.

[From the Clucinnati Chronicle, 11th.] At twenty-five minutes past 7 o'clock this orning nearly every building in the city of ovington was shaken as it by an carthquake, Officers Wyler and Goodnight found kinds of factories. Who will be the next and many people run out of their houses, four-ing that they would be crushed by falling time. Steating Lard.

Fred. Harper, an old negro man, and Henry Harper, a small negro boy, were presented before Judgo Craig this morning on the charge of stealing lard from the house of Hughes, Goslee & Co. The Harpers have been in the employ of the first they would be crushed by falling timbers, &c. It was soon ascertained that the sheek was caused by the explosion of the older at Henderson & Long's planing mill, on the north side of Elghth street, between Washington and Madison. The hands in the unil, numbering fourteen or affect, had been at work less than half an hour when the disaster occurred. The building which was a two-story brick, 48 feet wide and 100 long, was completely demolished, nothing remaining but a perilo of the front nothing remaining but a peritor of the front want, about twelve feet high, and that is in a badly damaged condit of A large crowd of Boyle soon gathered at the scene of the catassening those who were corried in the raise a shout ten minut's all the mee except one ad been found. he Olno river.

Henderson & Long have owned the planing hill twelve years, but it had previously been in use several years. The boiler had only cea in use about eighteen mouths, and was not considered unsafe and as none of the men who escaped knew few much steam the engine had on, it is mpossible to determine whether the accident is in consequence of a defective boiler, scarcity of water, or over pressure of steam. The damage to adjoining propert, was slight, not breaking any windows, but somewhat injuring the outnouses of John T. Lewis and J. T. Wase, which were in ad joining lots ou the cast. Mr. Levis had fortunately just eatled her children into the nouse from the yard or they wou d probably have received severe if not fatal injury, as the vard was filled with the debris blown from the wall of the null. Dr. Heller, who lives across Eighth street, from the scene of calamity, was so stunned by the concussion to lose control of his muscles.

Brick were scattered about promiseuous's every direction for the space of a hundred ect each way. It is impossible to give any idea as to the extent of the damage to the building, but it is thought very little of it can be saved, and the total loss is estimated at $25,000, without any insurance.

The seene of the disaster presents to view imply a big pile of rubbish, the demolition being so thorough as leave searcely a sem-blance of the building, and all the remaining walls will have to be torn down before rebuilding can be commenced Even the brick are to a great extent useless for rebuilding, so

THE VILLAIN BUCHIGNANI.

His Mysterious Disappearance from Montreal.

The Last Exploit of the Man who Divorced his Grandmother and Married his Grand-daughter-Signer Pignatelli's $16,000.

The Montreal News furnishes the sequel to the story of Buchignani, the dancingmaster who married Mrs. General Eaton in Washington, and afterward eloped with her grand-daughter, Miss Randolph. The aerrative of the News commences at the point where he had spent, in Paris, the last dollar of which he had robbed the old weman. The News says In his extremity he applied for aid to lignor Pignatelli, a nobleman and the son of a leading Neapolitan merehant, and represented to him that he was a man of ed l'amily, and owned a large property in Washington. Signor Pignatelli wanted references, and he was referred to a New fork banker. The banker being deceived is to the character and position of Buchignoni, reported favorably, and Signor Pignatelli was induced to advance the quondem wax-figure peddler the sum of $16,000, with which he purchased a large stock al French goods, and brought them with him to New York.

SIGNOR PIGNATELLI'S TROUBLES.

Subsequently he sent Signor Pignatelli an order for $100,000 of wines and liquors, promising to send him a bill of exchange for the amount by the next mail. This letter was addressed from Memphis, Tenn. though the rascal, as was subsequently found ont, was living at Quebec at the time, and was aided by an accomplice at Memphis, who first received the letter and then posted it for France. Signor Pignatelli, however, being warned in time by a friend in America, instead of sending on the wine, eame on himself to look after his $16,000. He first went to Memphis, and of course failed to find Buchignani there, but afterward traced him to Quebec Buchiguani asked and obtained delay. Subsequently he went to New York, where he was immediately arrested at the instance of his wife, whom he had so basely deserted, but through the influence Signor Pignatelli he was set at liberty

The complaint of the behavior of colored servants in our families and boarding houses since their elevation to the charac ter of Citizens and citizenesses, is nearly universal, and the evil is becoming one o such magnitude that it calls loudly for reform. Liberty has neither improved the morals nor the manners of this class of operatives. It may not be just to condemn the whole of them en masse, but, in the great majoray of eases, they are singularly unfaithful and untrustworthy. Their idea of freedom seems to be the right to do as they please. Aware that those who employ them require their services, they not only demand exorbitant wages, but, on being expostulated with for threaten to leave their employer, and . on the permanence of their service.

He . also states that there are about 3,000 Chinamen in Cahtornia now who are out of employment, and that more of them are at present returning to China than are coming here, owing to the approach of their holiday season, when all Chinamen, who wish to, and can, go back to the Empire. This state of things will probably continue for some months. He says the plan of taking large numbers of Chinamen through this State, and overland to the South, is not practicable, for, like other sensible workingmen, they would be likely to stop where the highest wages can be had. There is a chance for paid coolie labor in the South, but the track of their immigration will be across the Indian Ocean, through the Suez canal, and across The Atlautic to New Orleans."

OLD IRONSIDES."

Rear Admiral Charles Stewart and his Services-A Brave Record.

From the New York sun of the 9th.]
The death of Rear Admiral Charles Stewart, in Bordentown, N. J., and Sunday, removes the last conspicuous landmark of the early exploits of the United States Navy. Admiral Stewart was contemporary with Truxtan, Barron, John Rodgers, Deentur, Hall, Bainbridge, Preble, David Porter, Sr., and those other illustrious commanders whose names adoru the early pages of American navel history. In the very organization of the United States Navy, after the settlement and recognition of the Government, Stewart entered the (From the New York -un of the 91b.) NEW YORK MARKET.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE ACTION.

In this masterly position the action commenced, the three vessels keeping up a hot and unceasing fire for about a quarter of an hour, when that of the enemy sussibly slackened. The sea being covered with an immense cloud of smoke, and it being now moonlight, Capt. Stewart ordered the cannous adding to cease. In three minutes the smoke had blown away, when the leading ship of the cenny was seen under the lee beam of the Constitution, while the stornmost was luffing, as if she intended to tack and cross her wake. Giving as broadside to the ship abreast of her the American frigate threw her main and mixen topsails with topgasilant sails set. She was ignorant of the fate of the Cyane, but at the end of about an hour, having repaired damages, the hauled up, and met the Constitution coming down in quest of her. It was near 9 before the two ships crossed cach other on opposite tacks, the Constitution to windward, and exchanged broadsides. The English ship, finding her antagonist too heavy, immediately bore up, in doing which she got a raking discharge, when the Constitution boarded her fore-tack and made sail, keeping up a most effective chaving fire from her two bow guns, nearly every shot of which told. The two ships were so near each other that the ripping of the onemy's planks was heard on board the American frigate. The former was unable to support this long, and at 10 r. m. he came by the wind, tred a gun to the control of bat by the crippled condition of her running oslty which made Jack Tar a king of good days, and yet to this old man it was some-thing to die in these.
